SHARED READING ACTIVITIES

There are several ways to go about shared reading! Follow the activity prompts inside the story, then try out these activities:

Use the story to teach your child about different animals' diets, habitats, sounds, and movements. As you read, ask your child questions and encourage them to ask questions too!

Get your child's creative gears turning by asking them to add on to the story or create a whole new based on the illustrations.

When you come across numbers as you read, ask your child to repeat after you and point to the number on the board.

Ask your child questions that will exercise their critical thinking skills. For example, once they've learned that bees make honey, ask them where the bears got their honey from later on in the story.
